BATHTUBS ON WHEELS.

A Paris Luxury Suggested for Introduction into New York.

"Talking about new enterprises springing up here," said a gentleman to a reporter, "why there are thousands of schemes yet untried that you will be hearing of some day. Now there is the Parisian bath, for instance. Do you know how the Parisians pursue the practice said to be next to goodness?"

In Paris, the bath is a necessity. The admission of innocence as to the subject, the gentleman continued: "Well, to begin with, exceedingly few houses in Paris, except in the suburbs, have a bathroom. You might conclude from this statement that the Parisians are not particularly fond of bathing. But they are, and now I will tell you how they do it. We will suppose you are a Parisian living comfortably
